Katie Jeffries-Harris, mezzo-soprano

Katie Jeffries-Harris is a first-year undergraduate music student at Somerville College, having previously attended Chetham's School of Music in Manchester where she studied singing with Helen Francis.

She has been a member of the National Youth Choirs of Great Britain for seven years and is a regular soloist for 'Peterborough Voices'. Within Oxford she is a member of the Choir of Somerville College and Schola Cantorum, widely known as the university's chamber choir.

Recent engagements have included a series of performances of Britten's Noye's Fludde, participation in the Gabrieli Young Singers' Scheme, collaborating with the Gabrieli Consort to record Britten's War Requiem, and a lunchtime recital as part of Peterborough Arts Week.

Katie currently studies singing with Sally Burgess in London and is preparing for her performance exam later this term.

Douglas Knight, piano

Douglas was Organ Scholar at Somerville from 2010 until 2013 and currently studies with Katharine Pardee, in addition to receiving lessons from Daniel Moulton and Ann Elise Smoot. He has performed at St. Lawrence Jewry Lane, St. Giles Cripplegate, Union Chapel and other London churches, and as a member of the St. Giles Junior Organ Conservatoire he has played in masterclasses to Dame Gillian Weir, Hans Fagius, David Goode and Robert Quinney.

Douglas is also studying the clarinet with Elizabeth Drew having obtained his DipABRSM last summer under his first teacher Nicholas Shipman, with whom he began receiving lessons ten years ago. He has taken part in the North London Music Festival, winning prizes in woodwind classes, and enjoys playing contemporary repertoire.
